When my husband and I were engaged, he informed me, with a twinkle in his eye, that he wanted to introduce me to his 'girlfriend'. Puzzled, I knew he was up to something. We went next door and were greeted by the sweetest old lady name Alta. I immediately figured it out. Alta was in her 90s, yet she had a quick mind and an equally quick wit. I instantly fell in love with her and could see why she was my husband's other 'favourite' girl. He saw her planting tulips in the rain one day, 10 years ago and decided to offer some assistance. That was the beginning of their weekly Sunday dates—he would sing her songs on his guitar and she would make him rice pudding. They would talk about the week's events and enjoy their time together.

O.K. Sir. Good day.

Good day.

B) Identify the register/ domain of the discourse giving two characteristics.[4]

In studying the phenomenon usually referred to as sleep, we are actually dealing with more than one phenomenon. In point of fact, we spend the night alternating between two different types of sleep, each with different brain mechanisms and different purposes. As a person falls asleep, his brain waves develop a slower and less regular pattern than in a waking state. This is called orthodox sleep. In this state the brain is apparently resting. Its blood supply is reduced, and its temperature falls slightly. Breathing and heart rate are regular. The muscles remain slightly tensed. After about an hour in this state, however, the brain waves begin to show a more active pattern again, even though the person is apparently asleep very deeply. This is called paradoxical sleep because it has much in common with being awake. Paradoxical (active) sleep is marked by irregular breathing and heart rate, increased blood supply to the brain, and increased brain temperature. Most of the muscles are relaxed. There are various jerky movements of the body and face, including short bursts of rapid eye movement (REM's), which indicate that we are dreaming. Thus, we spend the night alternating between these two vital "restoration jobs": working on the brain (paradoxical sleep) and working on the body (orthodox sleep.)

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both
And be one traveler, long I stood
And looked down one as far as I could
To where it bent in the undergrowth;

Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
Though as for that the passing there
Had worn them really about the same,

And both that morning equally lay
In leaves no step had trodden black.
Oh, I kept the first for another day!
Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
I doubted if I should ever come back.

I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I-
I took the one less traveled by,
And that has made all the difference.

The Marriage of True Minds

- William Shakespeare

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
 Admit impediments ; love is not love
 Which alters when it alteration finds,
 Or bends with the remover to remove.
 O no, it is an ever - fixed mark
 That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
 It is the star to every wand'ring bark,
 Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
 Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
 Within his bending sickle's compass come;
 Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
 But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
 If this be error and upon me proved,
 I never writ, nor no man ever loved.
